Kuno is a folk legend about betrayal and forbidden love, spread over the years by itinerant storytellers. The chronicle is about Kuno, son of Lady Minnegardis. At the insistence of his uncle Wijnand van Borenburcht, he followed the priestly training in Aachen, but soon joined his uncle's army. There he proved himself a valiant knight and was made an officer of King Charles's bodyguard. He fell in love with the king's youngest daughter, after which they fled together to the castle of Wijnand.
